

What makes a good science question?

A good science question should be testable.

Testable questions ...

- can be answered either through observations or experiments.
- should be connected to scientific concepts.
- should be specific.
- should be answerable using the materials, tools, and time available.